

Berggasse 19, in Vienna's 9th district, is among the world's best-known addresses. Between 1891 and 1938, Sigmund Freud lived and worked in this typical late-19th-century Viennese apartment house. Here, in Freud's former office and private apartment, the Sigmund Freud Museum houses a permanent exhibition documenting the life and work of the founder of psychoanalysis. Unique film material showing the Freud family in the 1930s is to be seen in the video room. Furthermore, the Sigmund Freud Museum presents the "Contemporary Art Collection Sigmund Freud Museum Vienna" as well as temporary special exhibitions. A series of installations "A View from Outside – Continued" by international artists is on view day and night in the storefront of Berggasse 19. May 6, 2006 will mark the 150th anniversary of Sigmund Freud's birth. The Sigmund Freud Museum will be celebrating this special year with the exhibition "The Couch: Thinking in Repose" and with an open-air exhibition featuring 9 locations around Vienna. Besides the museum, the Sigmund Freud Foundation operates a scholarly centre with Europe's largest library on psychoanalysis.
